FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASEPPR Expands Portal Platform Service to Include European Markets

London (January 20, 2009) – Property & Portfolio Research (PPR) announces the expansion of its Portal service to include European research and forecasts, which allows users to access address-level data on a global scale.

This service is a user-friendly delivery platform for research, analytics, and property information that surround a specific address and property type. Information is presented through maps, graphs, tables, and text, and can be easily downloaded and printed.

“PPR’s extensive coverage of European property markets is now supported by our unique Portal service, which provides access to research and market intelligence in a timely and easy-to-use manner,” said Sotiris Tsolacos, Head of European Research for PPR.

This expansion will provide access to research and forecasts in support of European commercial property investment. This includes city and address-level information on local economies, leasing conditions, construction, and recent sales, as well as forecasts of future market performance.

PPR analyzes and prepares forecasts for commercial real estate markets in North America, Europe, and Asia for clients worldwide. The company provides research and advisory services ranging from analysis of global asset allocation to forecasts and insights that can be used at the deal level.
